New hopes for 1984

Last Monday the families and friends of Abe Calzola, John Moran, Andy Leo, Frank Grecco Jr., and Don McDonough crowded into Carbondale City Council chambers to watch Judge James Munley administer the oath of office to the recently elected councilmen.

Most of the people in the audience, however, had come for the main attraction, the inauguration of Charlotte Moro as Carbondale's first female mayor.

The ceremony was brief and was followed by a few informal remarks by Mayor Moro. Although her impromptu speech was only a couple of minutes long, we felt it was one of the best speeches we've ever heard as far as outlining an official's plans and policy. It said a lot about Charlotte Moro as a person.

She began by announcing that she intends to keep every campaign promise and proceeded to fulfill one by appointing Francis Dottle, Chief of Police, eliminating the "acting chief" title he had carried since succeeding the late Chief John Burke.

Charlotte Moro wanted to make it clear that she intends to keep her word. It was during her appointment of Chief Dottle that Mrs. Moro demonstrated two other qualities. "Do your best," she almost lovingly told Dottle, and then quipped, "And if you don't, you'll answer to me!" In one sentence she displayed trust and a keen sense of humor, yet she left no doubt that she will be a boss who intends to take charge.

Next, the new mayor appointed...

pointed John Kearney as finance director, showing that her first priority is to straighten out the bookkeeping mess at city hall. She also said that she would keep an open government, hiding nothing from the public.

Mrs. Moro said that she has not been satisfied with the credentials of those who have applied for the job of city manager and until she finds the right person she will personally assume most of the city manager's duties -- at no pay!

"I won't say the city is in bad shape. I'll say it is in very, very bad shape!" the mayor said seriously. But she added that one way or another, with the cooperation of city council, she will get Carbondale turned around by the end of her term of office.

Is she Superwoman? No! Mrs. Moro admits, "This burden (of solving the city's financial problems) is more than I can carry alone. I need everyone's help. I need your patience. I can change things overnight."

She's right. But she has already started to make changes. There's a new attitude at City Hall. It's optimistic.

Plenty of people have had great expectations in the past, only to see them dashed to pieces in the real world of hard knocks. However, we feel that this time something positive will result. We certainly hope so.

Good luck, Charlotte Moro and members of City Council. Best wishes for a healthy, prosperous, and progressive 1984!
